Market review

The Australian share market declined for a third consecutive month with the S&P/ASX 300 falling -0.5% despite seven out of the eleven sectors in the Index finishing higher. Materials was the standout sector producing a return of 6.3%, whilst Communication Services (+5.2%) and Consumer Staples (4.5%) also contributed positively. Heavy declines in the Financials (-7%) and Energy (-8.3%) sectors weighed on the Index.

After a strong recovery in global markets the month ended in volatility with the worst one-day decline of the year for the DJIA following news of the spread of the new Omicron Covid-19 variant. November saw a contrast in global equity performance across regions, with emerging markets climbing 1.6% in Australian dollar terms, as measured by the MSCI Emerging Markets NR Index, while developed markets fell -1.6%, represented by the MSCI World ex Australia NR Index (AUD Hedged).

The S&P/ASX 200 A-REIT Accumulation index advanced strongly during November, finishing the month 4.5% higher. Global real estate equities (represented by the FTSE EPRA/NAREIT Developed Ex Australia Index (AUD Hedged)) finished down -1.5% for the month, after its very strong October performance. November was relatively quiet across the A-REITs sector while Nareit cited the Omicron Variant as the potential cause for the pullback in G-REITs.

Australian Fixed Income markets rebounded in November, following the large selloff at the short end in late October. Yields fell substantially across the Australian Government Bonds curve over the month. Australian credit spreads continued to widen over the course of the month, with the Bloomberg AusBond Composite 0+ Yr Index ending the month with a strong result of 2.1%. As the October selloff was a uniquely Australian phenomenon, so too was the correction after the fact. In global markets, the Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate Index (AUD Hedged) Index returned 0.7% over the month.

Dynamic Asset Allocation Positioning

Portfolio Commentary

The Portfolio returned 1.78% in November, comfortably outperforming the peer group benchmark, and also outperforming the internal benchmark. Dynamic Asset Allocation (DAA) was a flat for the month. The unhedged global equity position protected the portfolio as the Australian dollar weakened over the month.

Manager selection was positive with the bulk of value add coming from global equities. Australian equities and global listed infrastructure were also additive to performance. From an equities perspective, BetaShares Global Sustainability Leaders ETF was the standout performer, benefiting from the strong performance within the information technology sector. Australian Ethical Australian Shares Fund gave back some performance over the month, underperforming the benchmark by 3%.

Outlook

Volatility in markets is expected to continue as the economic cycle moderates from high levels and policy support begins to be withdrawn. The emerging Omicron variant of Covid-19 and more persistent inflation prints coming out of the US further cloud the outlook for the upcoming holiday period.

Diversification and active management are key to maintaining our overweight position in risk assets at this point in the cycle. We see opportunity in real assets and some emerging markets where valuations are more attractive than global equities. Fixed income assets for the most part remain unattractive, with yields expected to rise further from here. We maintain our underweight position in fixed income, and within that, short duration positioning.
